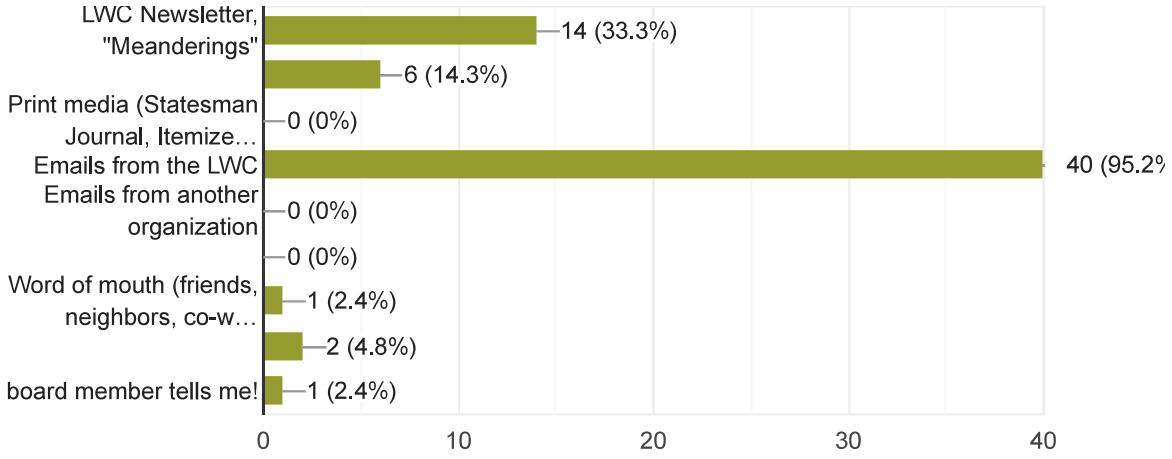
Love Your Watershed During COVID-19

42 responses

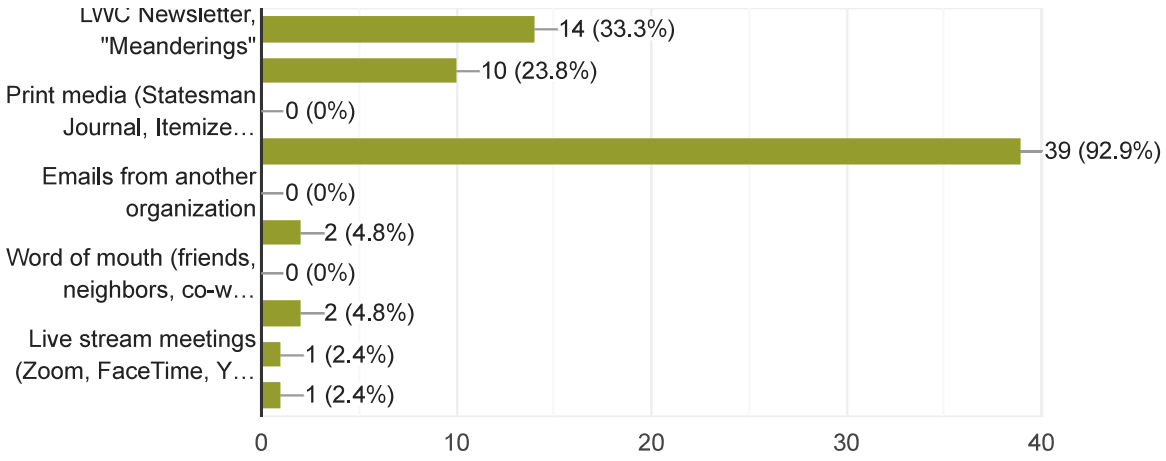
How do you normally receive information about LWC events and news?

42 responses



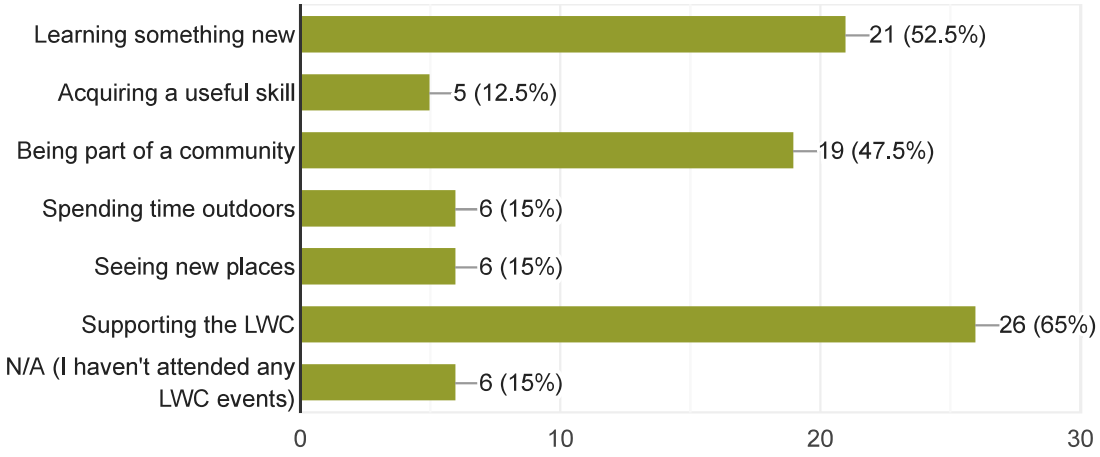
How do you prefer to get this kind of information from the LWC?

42 responses



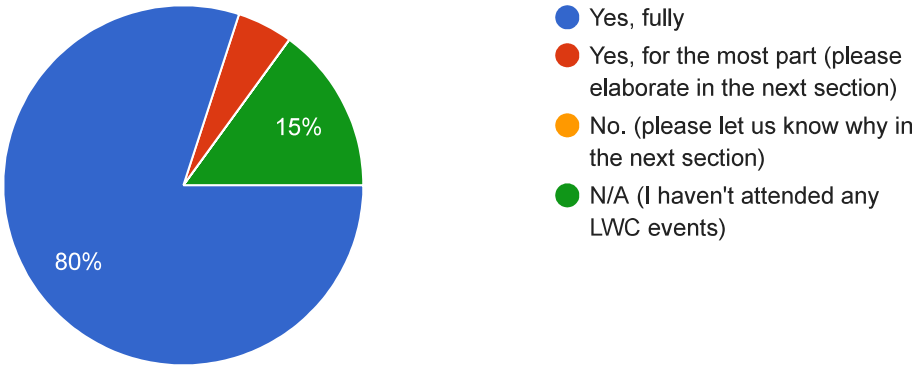
If you have attended an LWC event in the past, what were your main motivations for doing so (check as many boxes as apply)?

40 responses



Do you feel that the event(s) that you attended met your expectations?

40 responses



Love Your Watershed Event Suggestions

Please describe any adjustments or significant changes you would recommend to improve your experience at our events.

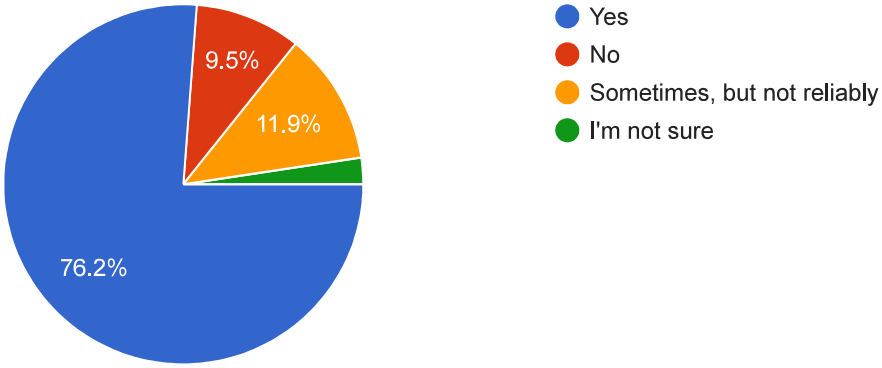
0 responses

No responses yet for this question.

Love Your Watershed Online Events (Part 1)

Do you have the technological capability to view and participate in online events (i.e. live stream events on Facebook or YouTube, video recordings, Zoom or other web-conferencing tools)?

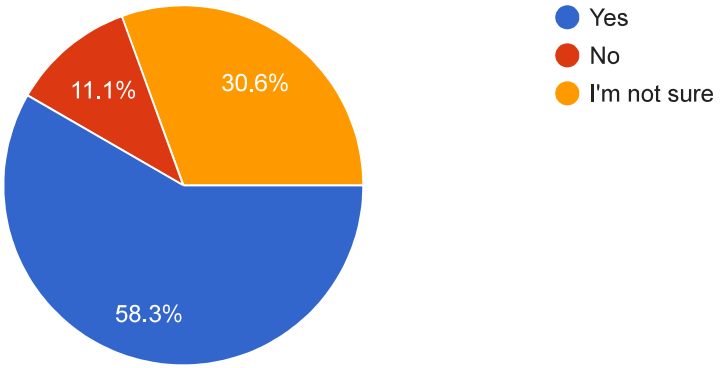
42 responses



Love Your Watershed Online Events (Part 2)

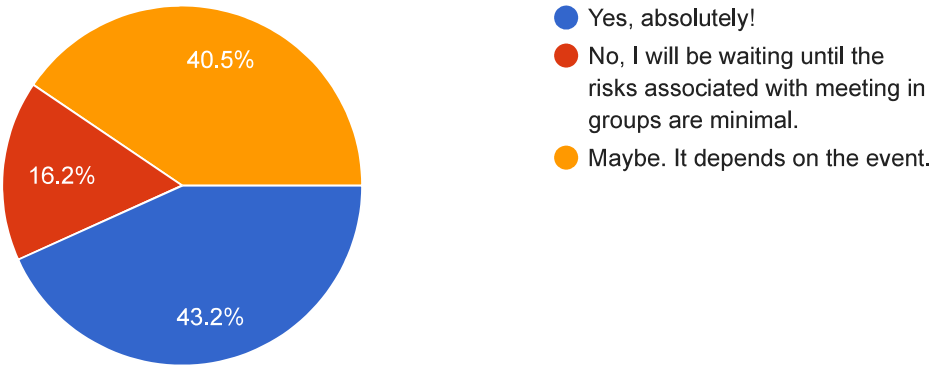
Are you interested in viewing and participating in online events hosted by the LWC?

36 responses



Once the state economy opens up again, would you feel comfortable attending an event that followed the current state and local social distancing guidelines?

37 responses



Which topic(s) do you think you would be interested in hearing about in an online format (such as a video or live stream)? Please feel free to be as specific as you like.

22 responses

- I would like to see more celebration of how awesome native plants are.
- Any thing about the central coastal region
- native plant identification
- updates on stream monitoring and watershed rehab, info on wildlife (including plants) in the watershed, removal of invasives
- Legal protections for the watershed; logging and aerial spraying.
- LWC habitat restoration projects
- Educational presentations
- Natural and social history of the Luckiamute area.
- The state of salmonids in the watershed. Current restoration efforts.
- Clean storm water projects
- LWC projects including videos of restoration work
- Biology of restoration, success stories, strategic plans
- reports on projects
- Project updates, EDRR weed profiles
- Watershed protection, volunteer opportunities, restoration efforts
- Probably video - I would likely not be watching them live but late at night or early in the morning
- This really varies and usually depends more upon my availability - date and time
- native plants, invasive species, fish habitat, and living creatures in our water, soil, etc.
- Building reptile habitat, building seasonal ponds for wildlife
- plant identification (including trees)
- Updates on previous projects would be nice
- A review of the master plan and the areas of the watershed in need of specific actions toward that plan.

What, if anything, would make you feel safe enough to attend an in-person event hosted by the LWC?

25 responses

- I feel safer in outside spaces right now.
- being outside, if everyone wears masks, not being too close to other people...
- I'm on chemotherapy so I'm staying close to home and do appreciate the opportunity to participate on line
- outdoor spaces with plenty of room to distance, use of face masks as necessary.
- long term decline in new cases
- Social distancing and everyone wearing masks
- Outdoor events with plenty of parking and open space would be most logical to pursue.
- Following state laws.
- knowing that everyone will be wearing a mask, distancing will be enforced, and hand sanitizer used.

- If the event is outdoors and folks are taking precautions (masks, etc.)
- If the event was being held outdoors
- people encouraging the social distance and people following that as well.
- Outdoors, lots of space.
- since I am in a high risk group, outdoor events will be most comfortable for me.
- outdoors events feel a bit safer than in doors ones.
- I won't be attending in-person because I am out-of-state, but I have no issues attending an in-person event.
- A clean environment - but that was true before Co-Vd19. :-}
- Low risk as determined by health authorities
- Not being crowded with a bunch of others.
- spacing and masks
- If everyone wore masks and kept distant.
- Everyone wearing masks
- Being outside, in the open air
- Well, I'm paranoid, I do prefer to rely upon scientific and medical solutions than wishes.
- Having it held outdoors

In general, which topics are you interested in hearing news and information about from the LWC? Feel free to be as specific as you like!

21 responses

- I love the work you do and info you share! I am glad you are doing this survey, it's a good idea!
- I'm open
- Wildlife, including plants; invasive species control and removal; crafts (like the find a fish contest!)
- current projects - know weed eradication, etc.
- Watershed restoration, impacts on drinking water, work with private timber companies and gov. organizations.
- LWC habitat restoration projects
- Keep doing what you are doing.
- Watersheds, plant and animal life, especially birds, ecology
- Nature and social history of Luckiamute. Restoration issues and efforts.
- Salmonids and restoration.
- habitat restoration
- projects, pandemic impacts on programs
- How to keep invasive species to a minimum.
- Again, I'm open and have been surprised that I find some of the presentations so very interesting! Basically, if the speaker is knowledgeable and passionate about their topic, that works best for me.
- A variety... many unknown one s were fascinatig--lampreys!
- Native plants, invasive species, fish.
- ?

- I have noticed a trend in the valley of farmers clearing the ditches of all trees and vegetation. Maybe an outreach to farmers addressing the concern of habitat loss and erosion could be useful.
- Any and all that affect the environment of this area
- I think I said that earlier on the previous page.
- specific actions to improve watershed health; what we can do as residents with our own properties and encourage in our neighborhoods.